Children’s Health: Part One

with Jennifer Franco, CN, ACN

Oftentimes, in a natural wellness setting, practitioners are hesitant to work with children because they are unsure where to begin with a potentially vulnerable population. In this 3-hr, livestream Virtual Seminar, we will teach a body systems approach focusing on the nutritional assessment of children and how to support them naturally throughout the young stages of a child’s life. In this seminar, we will also highlight:

This 3-hr seminar will highlight:

- The anatomy and physiology considerations of young children
- Functional support to the digestive, endocrine, immune and nervous systems
- Evaluating and developing a health protocol for supporting children from infancy to middle childhood.

The seminar handouts will include:

- + 3-to-a-page and full slide notes
- + Practical protocol recommendations
- + Assessment tools to use with patients
- + Reference sheet for literature review

Children’s Health: Part One will be hosted on Saturday, April 10th – 8am-11am PST / 11am-2pm EST

Getting to Know Jen Franco:

- What is your modality and how long have you been in practice? I practice Functional Nutrition and Herbal Therapy and have been practicing since 2008.
- What is unique about what you do? In practicing Functional Nutrition and Herbal Therapy, we take a step back, look at the body as a whole and assess the health of the body systems. We prioritize treatment strategies based on the priorities set in assessment as well as the and overall health goals.
- How does nutrition support you in helping get people well? As a nutritionist who strongly believes in the whole food philosophy, each one of my clients receives a protocol that entails both a whole foods based diet as well as taking whole food supplement concentrates.
- When not practicing... I love to spend time with my family and close friends, whether we cook together in the kitchen or travel around the world.
